Astoria, New York, June 28, 2023 — Museum of the Moving Image (MoMI) is pleased to announce Auriea Harvey: My Veins Are the Wires, My Body Is Your Keyboard, the first major survey of the pioneering net-artist and sculptor. The exhibition will feature more than 40 of Harvey's works, including her groundbreaking net-based interactives, video games, and augmented-reality sculptures from a career spanning nearly four decades. The exhibition will be on view from January 26 through June 2024.

Regina Harsanyi, the Museum's Associate Curator of Media Arts who organized the exhibition, notes, "Auriea Harvey has persistently reimagined and redefined the creative boundaries of networked technologies for more than three decades. She possesses a remarkable sensitivity to how the digital revolution of the 1990s spawned a societal shift in the way humans connect. Her trajectory—from creating artwork to be viewed solely in a web browser to challenging lines between virtual and tangible experiences through 3D printing and augmented reality—consistently reflects the paradoxical power of computers to enable intimacy while interfering with corporeal contact and occupation of shared space."

The Museum's exhibition brings together key works spanning 1987 to 2023, marking the significant phases of Harvey's artistic evolution thus far. Early works range from her handbound sketchbooks to net-based interactives on Entropy8.com.

Monumental, playable projections of Harvey's video games, co-created with longtime collaborator and partner Michaël Samyn, including The Endless Forest (2005–) and Sunset (2015), will also be featured. Harvey's recent works since 2015 predominantly feature 3D-printed and augmented-reality sculptures that weave her personal narrative into a broader conversation about Western art history and mythmaking.

In collaboration with Rhizome, several of Auriea Harvey's solo and collaborative works will be made accessible online for a global audience. This initiative resurrects some of her groundbreaking webpages, making them available to contemporary audiences after years of dormancy. Additionally, MoMI will launch an accompanying digital catalog, featuring essays from prominent media art scholars that delve into the historical significance and ongoing impact of Harvey's work. The catalog will also republish the Realtime Art Manifesto with updated commentary, reflecting Harvey and Samyn's pivotal role in defining the discourse around real-time 3D as a fine art medium.

Auriea Harvey (b. 1971, Indianapolis, IN) is an artist living and working in Rome. Her practice encompasses virtual and tangible sculptures, drawings and simulations that blend digital and handmade production including 3D printing, augmented and virtual reality. Drawing from her extensive experience in net art and video games in the collaborative groups Entropy8Zuper!, Tale of Tales, and Song of Songs, she brings personal narratives and character development to her practice. She is primarily concerned with making the mythological world visible through form, interaction and immersion. Her works are a synthesis of art historical reference and imagination, and she is engaged across time, media, and material to define what sculptural production means in the present moment. Before moving to Europe, Harvey went to Parsons School of Design for sculpture, living and working in New York for a decade. The artist's work can be found in the permanent collections of the Whitney Museum of American Art, Buffalo AKG Museum, Walker Art Center, and Rhizome's Net Art Anthology. Her video games and mixed reality works have had international success, including exhibitions at the Tinguely Museum, Basel; the Victoria & Albert Museum,

London; the New Museum, New York; and ZKM, Karlsruhe. Harvey is the recipient of a Creative Capital grant and a winner of the Independent Games Festival Nuovo Award. She is represented by bitforms gallery, NYC.

Special thanks to Rhizome; 4thBin; bitforms Gallery, NYC; and ITP NYU.
